Staff and students at Tambrey Primary School were treated to local guests and Aboriginal elders as part of the school's NAIDOC celebrations last week.

Activities centred on the celebration of local Yindjibarndi, Ngarluma and Torres Strait Island language and culture.

Deputy principal Kym Crawford said locally trained language specialist and illustrator Michelle Adams spoke to students about Aboriginal kinship and bush food.

"Visitors and presenters were proud of our senior Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander students in how they have conducted themselves when leading other students," she said.
